

Scholarship Opportunity

A scholarship is being made available for an interpreter to attend the Project Archaeology Workshop, July 23-27, 2018, at no cost. The workshop includes the Project Archaeology curriculum, Investigating Shelter. These nationally recognized and endorsed materials can be adapted to a variety of sites and historical periods. If your site contains evidence of human habitation over time, you will learn ways of interpreting the lives of the people who occupied the land.

If you would like more information about Project Archaeology, please visit their website: www.projectarchaeology.org The first two days of the workshop will cover the curriculum and offer ideas for use with the public. The final three days are optional, they include a day at the Truman Library and a visit to Truman's home and two days of excavation at the Atkins-Johnson Farm and Museum.

Interested applicants should write 100 words describing why you want to take the workshop and how you anticipate using the Project Archaeology materials at your site. For questions, please contact Gail Lundeen (816) 478-6051 or gail@lundeenweb.com Please send your 100 word application to gail@lundeenweb.com
